So this is where I spent most of my working-days so far.

I started as a newbie with no experience working in a store and by the time I left for another job I really felt like a pro in this business.

I was responsible for the shoe-area for a while, clothes another time, reclaims, the tough customers and in my last year I also did part-time as a bike-mechanic.

I learned a lot about problem-solving and working in a team.

My first "real" job where I learned the basics in sales and customer-service.

It was a really demanding job but I really think it gave me a lot regarding how to handle all types of customers.

Part-time job during my high-school studies.
